"No One Knows proves that you can tell a complex and commanding story in a very short timeframe without losing any of the strength needed. I can see this playing very well indeed and gaining lots of fans." – Louise Hector, (Louise Reviews UK)

A story about family, public perceptions, and secrets.

Synopsis

The Smiths could be any family. They could be your neighbors. When twelve-year old Jason looks into his neighbor's window, he learns he's not the only kid living in an abusive environment. What he learns will change his life forever.

Director's Statement - Bune Tomlinson

The consequences of sexual abuse on a child will manifest themselves in many forms and to many degrees. No One Knows explores the unusual effects on one such victim.

I really liked the theme of this film because it looks very directly at the horror of the experience plus some unusual extended effects and makes us rethink our definition of the "Victim". I wanted to explore the various tentacles that radiate from the direct involvement and follow them through the shadowy aftermath. - Bune Tomlinson

Producer's Statement - Daniel Hoyos

I personally felt like this story needed to be told because so many children around the world suffer in silence from different forms of terror. NO ONE KNOWS was a labor of love shot over a long weekend this past August in Oklahoma City, after reading the script written by Jamie Livingston-Dierks I felt an instant emotional connection to the characters.

My hope for NO ONE KNOWS is that together we can bring awareness about this very serious issue to people all across the world through the medium of cinema. - Daniel Hoyos
